

I do not wish to see the FCC do anything that would modify or lessen the protections created by Indiana's Telephone Privacy law.

Indiana's law has dramatically lessened the numbers of call that we recieved in our household. We would get calls nearly every day. Even on Sundays! Now it is a very rare occasion to recieve a marketing call.

My wife and I both work and our time at home in the evenings were often interrupted by the annoying calls. We are not by our nature rude people but those calls would force us to be rude just to get rid of them. I don't like that and do not want our law weakened to a point that we again begin to recieve those calls.
